CHAOS RESULTS FROM LACK OF TRAFFIC CODE

Many Disjointed Ordinances Now on Statute Books of City.

NEED FOR CODIFICATION

Council Tired of Taking Several Bites at One Cherry.

Although the statute books are cluttered up with a dozen or more ordinances affecting traffic, all more or less conflicting and adopted without any reference to each other, there is a chaotic condition of the street situation at congested points.

The Police Department has reported violations of what is known as the Ellett law, requiring drivers to go to the right, only to have the fines collected and the cases dismissed. The Police Department is practically powerless to control the use of the streets, save where public safety is obviously menaced, when any street may be closed to traffic.

Progressive members of the Council say that they are tired of taking small bites at one cherry—that they have passed ordinance after ordinance without effect other than to complicate the records and make it more and more difficult for the wayfarer to find out what is the law. According to these men there is a crying need for a traffic code. There are disjointed ordinances on the books without reference to each other; there are many points not covered by any statute, of which they never heard, yet there is no act prohibiting young children from driving motor cars or for licensing chauffeurs, the regulations drawn up by the Automobile Club of Richmond being in the old Council.

Need a Traffic Code.
According to many well informed people, Richmond stands greatly in need of a traffic code; that is, a systematic revision and codification of the various existing ordinances affecting the use of streets for vehicular traffic. Last July the Mayor signed the Ellett ordinance, which had hung fire in the Council for six months. It is under that act that the city is now endeavoring to regulate traffic, and while admittedly a long step in the right direction, even its patron admits its incompleteness. It is neither sufficiently comprehensive nor sufficiently elastic to suit all conditions. An ordinance regulating the running of automobiles drawn and approved by the Richmond Automobile Club, and recommended by the Committee on Ordinance, Charter and Reform, was tabled in the Council of Aldermen in July at the suggestion of Mr. Ellett, who claimed that his measure had sufficiently covered the situation. It died in the old Council, and may be reintroduced to-morrow night. It provided for a license for the driver of a motor car, and all persons running motor cars on the streets of Richmond, and required applicants for license to be eighteen years of age. At present a child of ten may operate a high topped car on the street without interference by the authorities, unless the police can make out a case of reckless driving.

Weight of Ordinances.
There are already many ordinances regulating the speed of automobiles, motor cars, and street cars in streets and parks; requiring brakes on vehicles of certain types; requiring after May 1 next tires of a specified width on vehicles hauling heavy loads; prohibiting heavy loads on streets; passing along smooth paved streets; various State and city laws relating to license taxes for both horse vehicles and motor cars, and requiring lights on motor vehicles and bicycles at night. In addition there are laws as to the registration of motor cars with the Secretary of the Commonwealth and the display of a serial number, and there are still further police regulations as to the use of the streets.

As a remedy for existing conditions, which all parties agree are intolerable in a city of the size and commercial importance of Richmond, some members of the new Council have proposed the appointment of a special committee of Councilmen, or, better still, a commission of owners and drivers of vehicles, to draft a chapter in the new city code on traffic, with the aid of the City Attorney, embracing all provisions that might be of use to the streets.

Want Vest Pocket Edition.
Such a traffic code would include in condensed and accessible form all regulations regarding the use of streets by various classes of vehicles, motor cars, bicycles and street cars. It would be fully indexed, and could be issued in vest pocket form and generally distributed among drivers, motor car owners and contractors and dealers who own many vehicles. It is in much the same way as the Building Code has been issued to builders, contractors and architects, and the electrical and plumbing codes to the workers in those trades.

The Board of Police Commissioners has recently suggested that the Council, by a general resolution, turn over traffic matters to it, to make such rules as might seem necessary, and to alter them from time to time as conditions seemed to justify. Such a request was made to the old Council, but it was not repeated in the new Council and tabled in the Ordinance, Charter and Reform Committee a few nights ago. Members of the Council do not consider such a step desirable, especially as the city fathers are jealous of the rights and have no intention of delegating any of their prerogatives.

Discretionary Powers.
It has been suggested by Councilmen, however, that in the proposed general traffic code there might be a provision that in certain cases of emergency, such as when there are to be great military or civic parades, or when a street may be considered dangerous, the Police Department would have authority to temporarily exercise its power now under State law, where the street may be considered dangerous, and has recently closed Main Street between Eleventh and Twelfth, pending repairs to the First National Bank building. In other ways also the Police Board might be given authority to take emergency action to relieve congestion, promote public safety, and to regulate the placing of obstructions, such as building material, in the streets, at present one of the greatest obstructions to traffic and one of the most abused privileges granted by the city.

On complaint of Councilman Watkins and Alderman Gilman, both contracting plasterers, the Council last year rejected an ordinance requiring all builders to secure a permit before placing any building material in the streets.

Streets Much Obstructed.
It is recognized that there should be some supervision of the obstruction of the street by material, some limit of the so that streets may not be used merely as a storage yard for the sale of old building material, and some limit of the proportion of the street to be used by the contractor, especially where it would be practicable to use a side street without obstructing a main thoroughfare, and more strict requirements that the street be cleared of debris and builders' rubbish when the building operations are completed. All of this, it is believed, could be provided for in the traffic code which is proposed.

In order to secure the best results it has been suggested that instead of leaving the wording of the new law to the City Attorney or the clerk of some committee, that a definite commission be named, say of one owner of heavy hauling teams, one automobile owner, one driver of pleasure horses, one member of the Police Board and several Councilmen. The plan would be to follow in drafting the present building code.

Provisions of Ellett Law.
The Ellett law adopted by the Board of Aldermen last February and tabled in the Council until July when it was passed, requires the driver of every vehicle to go to the right in making another vehicle in order to pass without interference and to pass from behind on the left. It forbids any one to leave any vehicle unattended in front of the entrance to any office building, theatre, hotel, department store or other place of congestion, a provision now daily violated under the very eyes of police officers.

The ordinance suggested by the Automobile Club, which died in the old Board of Aldermen, proposed that the driver of every motor car should obtain a license before examination before a special board as to his qualifications for running the machine. It proposed that the Board of Police Commissioners should appoint three "discreet persons" to examine and license chauffeurs, and that the license shall not be granted to a person under eighteen years of age, or until the applicant has shown himself competent to operate and control his car with reasonable safety to himself and to occupants of his car, as well as to pedestrians and other persons using the streets.

Great Improvement Already.
Acting under the provisions of the Ellett law requiring driving to the right, the Police Department has been making an effort to relieve congestion in crowded streets, and has already made a marked improvement in the conditions of traffic in some sections. Drivers are becoming familiar with the regulations, and were the laws bearing on vehicular traffic codified, indexed and put in accessible form so that one would not have to employ an attorney to search them out of the voluminous records in the office of the City Clerk, it is believed there would be little difficulty in making the use of the streets both reasonably safe and expeditious, even though the city were to grow to many times its present size, and its commerce and traffic increase accordingly.

Denies Strike Report.
Atlanta, Ga., October 2.—Vice-President A. P. Kelly of the Brotherhood of Engineers and Firemen, to-night denied that a strike is imminent on the Georgia Railroad, or that the members of the order would be represented in voting Saturday and Sunday on the question of a strike.

To the Masses.

Martha Williams, colored, charged with felonious assault upon Edward Fenner, the negro killed by Waverly Colles, will be tried before Judge Ellett in Hustings Court, Room 2, this morning.

She struck Fenner over the head with a brick, and he was killed. This led up to the killing of the victim.

Old Negro Prayed.
Out of the list of the victims of the crime of Waverly Colles, and the terrible, although just, sentence inflicted, one noble, conscientious action has been probably never forgotten. Reaching upon the jury, and a true type of the ante bellum darkey, performed an act which the remaining eleven jurors will probably never forget. Reaching the supreme significance of his duty, the night before the trial bore heavily on him, while his colleagues, who were badly treated, dirty, and prayed that he and them might not err, and asked for guidance. It was a scene not soon to be forgotten. One of the jurors has described it as the most beautiful thing he had ever witnessed.
